HARVARD HAS FEAR FOR U. OF P. TEAM.

(Special to The Evening World.)

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 31.-Coach Reid showed his dread of Pennsylvania vesterday when he stopped the 'Varsity yesterday when he stopped the 'Varaity in the middle of its game against the scrub and drilled it on breaking up the "guards-back" formation. The proceeding was a new one to Harvard men, who have never before known a practice game to be interrupted in any way.

Reid does not believe that Pennsylvania is nearly so weak as rumor says she is. He thinks she is going to give the Crimson a dusty hunt for vactory, and he is determined that nothing shall be left undone that will make Harvard's eleven ready for the impending struggle.

Redfern can congratulate himself on having driven a good bargain. The paers are to be signed in a day or so. These seem to be days of extravagance in jockeys. The rage seems to toward little boys just in their teens, is t to be believed that these little boys have better judgment and are better riders than boys much older and with more experience? Is it not really more a matter of horse than of jockey?

The Material Counts.

Sam Doggett rode Reformer yester-day and won with him. He put up just as skilful a ride as any other jockey could have done. He had the material punter. Even here, however, ther can hope for little gain against West Point, since Daly will surely refuse to murt the punts, and moreover, will insist, probably, on cutting them down from twenty to thirty yards every time by his peculiar ability is running them back."

with excellent judgment. It is all a matter of opportunity and luck.

The writer took occasion to mention the fact that Booker was a rider of considerable ability, who had no chance to show it because the opportunity was not offered. Booker got mounts that no other jockey would accept and when no other jockey would accept and when no other jockey was available. The result was that he was always in the also rans and when his name was mentioned as a rider it was received with a contemptuous shrug.

and he is riding as well as any other boy.

It is the opportunity that forces a rider to the front; on the other hand, lack of good mounts will unmake a jockey. Take Shaw, whose services were eagerly sought for in the spring. He rides just as well but owners and trainers have got it into their heads that Shaw has gone back or is hooded in some way.

Shaw therefore is compelled to accept inferior mounts, and he doesn't win. Yet he is the best rider in this country to-day. Booker's Chances Were Few.

Since calling attention to Booker Mr. Gideon has taken the boy up, and he has ridden quite a few winners. More-he is the best riger in the day.

The value of jockeys is greatly overrated, and no doubt the inflation in price is due to the traffic in riders that

Where half of the horses are standing and half are in motion the starts are bound to be ragged. The experience of the riders during the past few days has demoralized them a bit, and this also has its bearing on the starts.
